Dear John Harris Campus Parents and Guardians,

I wish to provide you with an update. We had great days on Thursday and Friday, and we are looking forward to continuing this trajectory into next week.

We have wonderful students here at John Harris Campus, and as our school vision states, we are committed to providing a high-quality education in a respectful learning environment. While a few students this week have made unacceptable choices, the majority of our students are attending class and have remained academically focused.

As previously shared, we have implemented several measures to enhance school safety. We have increased adult supervision and support, reinforced the need to remove all hats and hoods before entering the building, and provided students with spaces to process the week's events.

On Monday, September 13th, students will receive updated schedules which must always be kept with them. Effective on Wednesday, September 15th students must show their student ID to enter the building. Students are also to always wear their ID while present in the building. Students are expected to be in all classes, each day and on time. As of Monday, September 13th parents and guardians will be contacted regarding student attendance. Sometime next week, students will receive a clear bookbag (or backpack), non-see through bookbags will not be permitted.

Thank you for reinforcing these expectations with students and for your continued support and cooperation as we work together to make great things happen for all John Harris Campus students. In the near future, we will hold parent focus group discussions so that together we can provide our students with the best educational experience possible. Best wishes for a great weekend, and we look forward to seeing all students on Monday.

In Partnership,

Ms. Michelle Felton, Principal

Harrisburg High School, John Harris Campus
